

A Celebration

Of Life

Welcome to the Heath

A celebration of life starts with a simple premise: That every life is meaningful and deserves to be celebrated.

We at the Heath are here to work with you and your family to incorporate your personal touches, because giving honour to a loved one makes the entire experience more meaningful celebrating life

Wakes and funerals are both ceremonies which are held to honour of the deceased, and they appear in many different cultures. The key difference between a wake and a funeral is that a wake is a time for visitation and commemoration of the deceased, whilst a funeral is a formal ceremony which is conducted by an officiate. In many cases, both a wake and a funeral are held as part of a series of rituals which are meant to commemorate the passing of a beloved family member, friend, and member of a community.

Traditionally, a wake is held on the night before a funeral. Attendees at the wake stay up all night with the body, which is laid out so that people can visit and spend time with the deceased. Historically, funerals were held the day after a death, to give people time to gather for the event, and the body would be laid out in the home of the deceased or a family member, allowing members of the community to visit. Some cultures retain this tradition, while others hold the wake at a funeral home, and in some cases, the body may not be present at all.

At a wake, people eat, exchange stories about the deceased, sing traditional songs , laments and support the family members of the deceased. Different cultures have different beliefs about the wake, but generally people stay up all night with the deceased as a mark of respect, although wakes can actually become quite raucous, especially in the early hours of the morning.

Celebrations at the Heath

There are numerous occasions when you need a special place for a lunch, or a party at any time of day, maybe for a christening, charity event, or funeral wake when you need unobtrusive but high quality catering.

The Heath is an ideal choice for such events; within easy walking distance of most central places of worship and places of work.

Both the Foodini restaurant and the events Hall are suitably welcoming and intimate venues for these occasions - for receptions they can accommodate up to 60 and 200 respectively

Our Sycamore and Poplar room are the ideal venue to hold a small but private occasion from 20 – 80 guests

Heath Catering have considerable successful experience catering for and running such events; you can rest assured you are in capable professional hands. We will take care of all the details on the day so you can spend time with your guests.
